

Foreword and Introduction

Household goods in the European medieval and early modern countryside – an introduction
Catarina Tente, Claudia Theune

Archaeology and Household

Is that all there is? Reflections on the presence and survival of household goods in archaeological contexts

Bert Groenewoudt, Rowin van Lanen

Household goods illuminated by motivation and need theories in Hanfelden Castle in the early modern countryside of Styria, Austria

Iris Winkelbauer, Claudia Theune

Household and home life in the Russian Countryside during the sixteenth to first half of the eighteenth century, according to archaeological finds in Alexandrovskaya Sloboda

Irina Zaytseva

Tenth-century peasant houses and household goods. The potential and limitations of the archaeological record from Beira Alta (Portugal).

Tente, Gabriel de Souza, João Luís Veloso, Catarina Meira

Temporary households

Exploring the “extended” household? Historical landscapes, material culture and building materials at the Monte Fasce settlements, Liguria, Italy (17th-21st c.)

Giulia Bizzarri, Anna Stagno

Household in a settlement dealing with large animal husbandry from the 10-11th century in west Hungary

Ádám Pátkai

Living conditions and household

Making a house a home: odd deposits in ordinary households in later medieval Ireland 1200-1600 AD

Karen Dempsey

Checking-in at the multispecies hotel: Natureculture and the early medieval house

Rachel Brody

Households from early medieval rural settlements in Alto Alentejo (Central Portugal): material culture and social structures

Sara Prata, Fabián Cuesta-Gómez

Spatial structure and household

Refitting the past. The spatial distribution of finds as a key for understanding activities and the use of space in medieval farm buildings in the Northern Netherlands

Jan van Doesburg

Kecskemét-Törökfái-dűlő: structure and topographical elements of an Árpadian-age settlement in the Danube-Tisza Interfluve Region, Hungary

Nikoletta Lukács

Social and economic status and household

Household goods of late medieval peasants in Denmark

Mette Svart Kristiansen

Household goods from excavations at homestead in Kopaniec (Seiferschau), Poland

Paweł Duma, Jerzy Piekalski

Contextual value of iron household goods in the late medieval countryside: testimony of the Czech Lands

Tomáš Klir, Martin Janovský, Lucie Hylmarová

Peasant household – noble household: objects and structures. Some remarks on household archaeology of late medieval Hungary

László Ferenczi, Edit Sárosi, Csilla Zatykó

Social inequality and household goods in central Iberia during the early middle ages

Carlos Tejerizo

Lord in the Village: Can houseware and personal equipment indicate the presence of a social class?

Andrej Janeš

Local societies and early medieval domestic economies in the light of the Basque Country archaeological record (8th-10th centuries)

Juan Antonio Quirós Castillo

Particular activities – particular household objects

Pottery in medieval rural households – perspectives of archaeological research in Southern Germany

Rainer Schreg

Household goods for winter travel and leisure in Norway – objects, games and processes of enculturation

Marie Ødegaard, Kjetil Loftsgarden

Household goods of Ottoman soldiers in the rural fortified settlements of the 16th–17th century in Hungary

Ágnes Kolláth, Bianka Kovács, Gyöngyi Kovács, Zsófia Náday

A sign of wealth or everyday objects? The use of stoneware vessels in medieval and early modern Southern Finland

Tuuli Heinonen

Artefacts of osseous and keratinous materials from the Netherlands – the project

Jørn Zeiler, Marloes J. Rijkeljkhuizen, Marloes, Joyce van Dijk